

Student Conduct Process

In the event that an incident is reported to the Office of Student Rights and Responsibilities:

Scenario 1

If there is not enough information to determine that a violation of the student conduct code has occurred, the student conduct process ends.

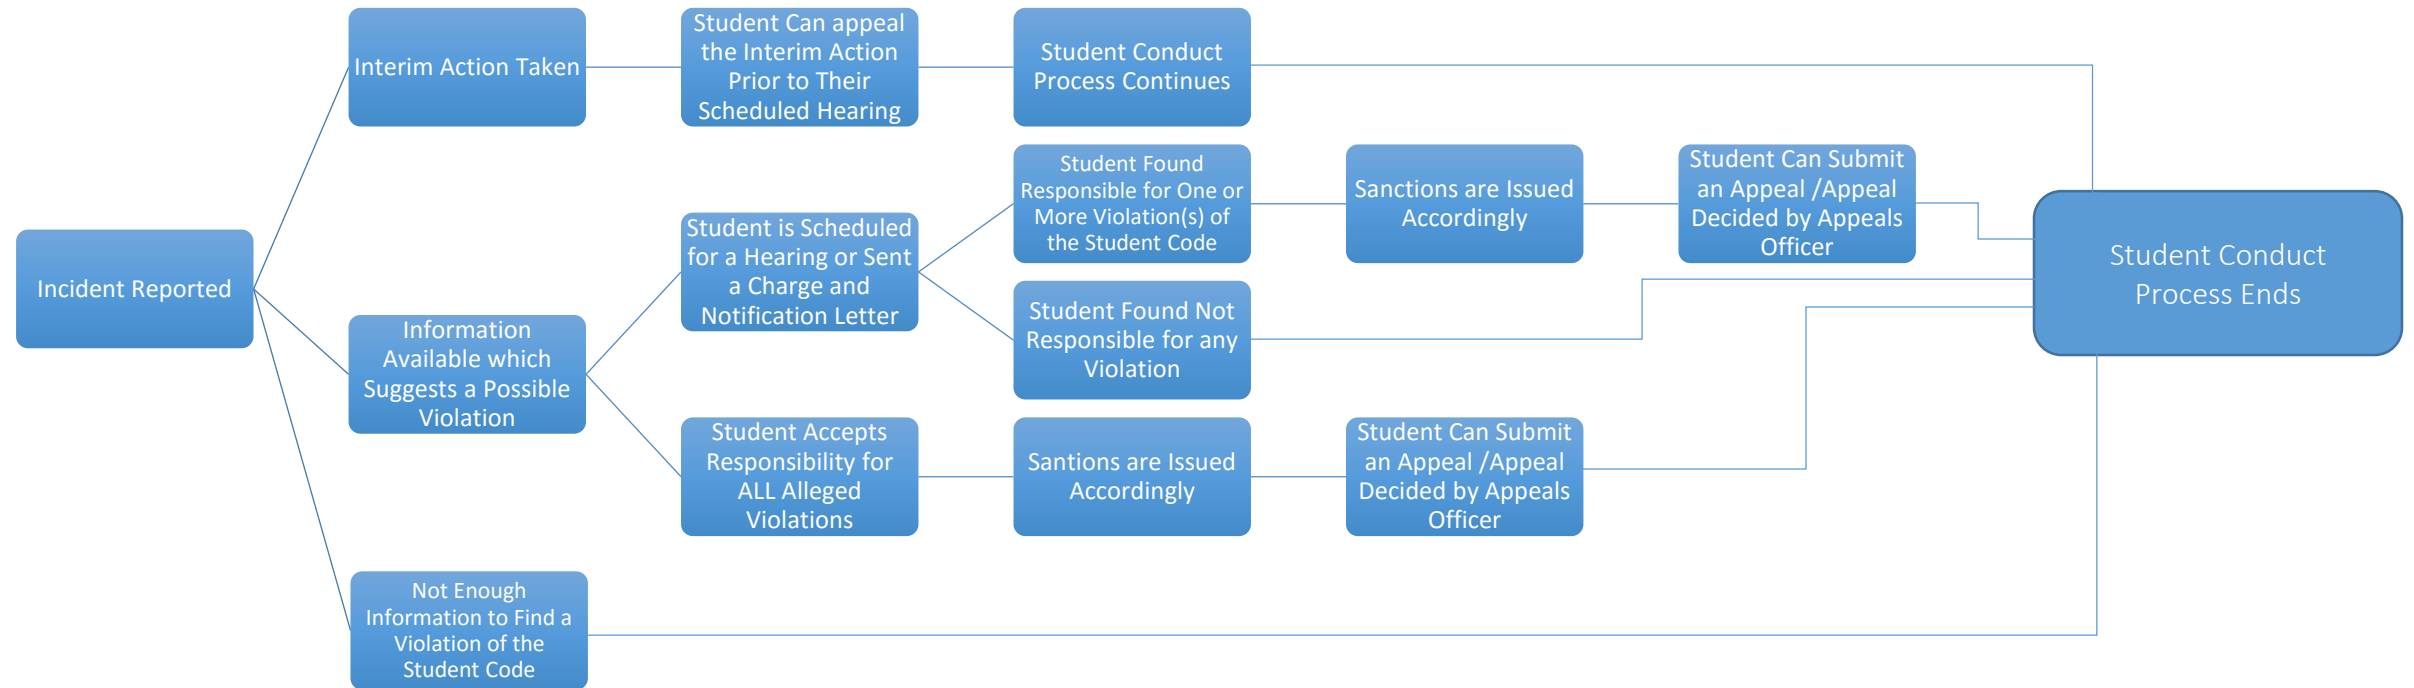

Scenario 2

If there is information available which suggests a possible violation of the student conduct code, a student will be scheduled for a hearing or sent a charge and notification letter.

If the student is found responsible for one or more violations of the student conduct code, sanctions will be issued accordingly. The student may then submit an appeal which will then be decided by an appeals officer. Then the student conduct process ends.

If a student is found not responsible for any violation of the student conduct code, the process ends.

A student may also accept responsibility for ALL alleged violations. Once responsibility is accepted, sanctions will be issued accordingly. The student may then submit an appeal which will then be decided by an appeals officer. Then the student conduct process ends.

Scenario 3

If an incident is reported there may be sufficient information for an Interim Action to be taken. A student can appeal the interim action prior to their scheduled hearing. Following the interim action or the appeal, the student conduct process continues.
